

Women's Colorful Histories Uncovered With Online Tools at OneGreatFamily.com

Springville, UT – Eileen Hutzal Johnson has been interested in her family tree for years. Recently, her genealogy efforts paid off when she made an exciting discovery. “I have looked for my family history in many ways,” said Johnson. “But I recently traced my family back to the Mayflower through links uncovered by OneGreatFamily.com!”

“Now I go back 18 generations,” she continued. “OneGreatFamily was a great help to my research.” Like Eileen, most people have a general curiosity about their family history, and hundreds of millions are seeking to learn more about their roots.

If you want to start working on your own genealogy, gather as much information as you can from your living relatives. Write down everything – names (both married and maiden); dates of birth, marriage, and death; any stories or interesting facts. Collect photos and old documents and scan them.

OneGreatFamily.com: Powerful Genealogy Site Uncovers Family History

Once you've gathered known information, enter it into a computer. At OneGreatFamily.com you can enter facts and photos and build your own family tree.

The real fun begins when you try to uncover new information! Many genealogy web sites publish historical documents that you can research for a fee. Tap into the research of genealogy enthusiasts from all over the world with a subscription to OneGreatFamily.com.

As you enter your known information, the site's search engine compares your facts against hundreds of millions of others already entered at the site. Then it “piggybacks” the work of many different people together, growing your tree by whole branches at a time.

Toni Edwards, of Amarillo, TX, found priceless information about her family online. “I was raised in a children's home,” explained Edwards. “I knew nothing about my family or my history. All I knew was my grandmother's [married] name. OneGreatFamily.com helped me first find her maiden name, and then it pointed me to many other ancestors, details about where they'd lived, and more.”

"I was able to teach my children about our history – it was fantastic! We never would have known anything about these people if it hadn't been for what we found at OneGreatFamily.com."

Uncovering your family history is a rewarding experience. You never know what might turn up in your background – heroes or villains! But you'll have fun finding the details.
